

Integrating Library of Congress Primary Resources and ELL Supports into Social Studies Lesson Plans

Margot Harris, Founding Member, Third Spaces LLC
 ESOL Educational Associate, Baltimore City Public Schools

The Integrating Library of Congress Primary Resources into High School Social Studies Lesson Plans project serves as the prototype for the Third Spaces Modular Self-Paced Professional Development Training (MSPT) program. The modules provide methods and lesson plans that help teachers overcome the challenges they face when using and incorporating Library of Congress primary resources into their curricula while supporting their English Language Learners (ELL).

Each module quickly identifies and reviews teaching strategies that address specific Library of Congress primary source assets by guiding instructors through selected resources and demonstrating strategic adaptations to benefit all students, with a special emphasis on students whose first language is not English. Whether used individually or in combination, each module provides the teacher with 'out-of-the-box,' standards-aligned lessons that will fully engage every student.

Modules

- Connect Background Knowledge: Using Images to Build Content Vocabulary
- What's So Funny? Primary Sourced Political Cartoons Bridge Past to Present
- Write It Out! Guide Learners From Analysis to Writing
- Speak Your Mind! Using Data to Support Informed Opinions
- What Does That Say? Differentiated Close Reading and Scaffolding Document-Based Questions

Explore the Modules from your Device

<https://www.thirdspacesinc.com/courses>

Project Team

Content Authors

Margot Harris, Founding Member, Third Spaces LLC
 ESOL Educational Associate, Baltimore City Public Schools
 Debra Adler, Educational Consultant, Third Spaces LLC

Developmental Editor

Wendy Trakes, Digital Humanities Specialist, Third Spaces LLC

Instructional Design Support

Watch Me Learning Services, LLC